Most of the theming we talk about here on Android Central takes place on the home screen, so theming the launcher is important. It is not, however, the only area of your phone you can theme. Even without system-wide themes on TouchWiz, Sense UI and the like, it's possible — nay, easy — to theme many parts of your phone. So, let's get our theme on! While Google's Messenger app (opens in new tab) brings color to its conversations, the colors are random, and what's more, Messenger is ridiculously bright. Textra (opens in new tab) is one of the best SMS apps on Android, and one of its many touted features is its theme customization. Want a dark theme? Dark or AMOLED black, Textra's got you. Want to make your text bubbles circle, square, or somewhere in between? Textra's up for them all. Want to replace the manufacturer emoji you see with Google's emoji? Or iOS emoji? Textra's got some add-ons for just that. Textra's theming is about as close as you'll get to iMessage's look on Android, without the hassle of seeing green for non-Apple contacts. Textra's colors and shapes are quite customizable and allow you to match Textra to your theme, which is great because it means that when you use the Textra pop-up to reply to a text, it'll match the home screen it's being overlaid on. Download Textra (Free, $2.99) (opens in new tab) | Twitter — Talon Talon (opens in new tab) is one of many great Twitter clients with a customizable layout and theme. Talon allows you to choose both a primary and accent color to your theme in addition to setting the light, dark or AMOLED black base theme. Another benefit here is the inclusion of a night mode, allowing you to use a brighter base theme during the day and a darker base theme during a user-set 'night' period. The themes, as well as the ability to customize your feed layouts and swipeable home pages, allows Talon to fit quite nicely into any theme and use case you could have for Twitter, from saved searches for your weekly live Tweets to checking on the latest tweets from your favorite AC nerds. Download Talon ($1.49) (opens in new tab) | Dialer — Simpler Dialer Simpler Dialer's (opens in new tab) ease of use and simple layout are what drew me to the app, but what drove me to buy Simpler Pro and use it over HTC's dialer were its recent caller ID feature and its themes. Simpler's themes are a bit more basic than Textra or Talon, but you can still take a dark theme and pick one of 40 theme colors. If you don't want your contacts without pictures being random colors, you can also set them to be a plain gray or your theme color. Download Caller ID and Dialer by Simpler (Free) (opens in new tab) | File manager — Solid Explorer Solid Explorer (opens in new tab) been my file manager for years thanks to its magnificent feature set, including the ability to stream my movies from Google Drive to MX Player. Solid Explorer's themes allow you to pick a primary color for the bars and icons, as well as an accent color for action buttons, subheaders, and progress bars. You can also customize the look of your icons. Download Solid Explorer (Free, $1.99) (opens in new tab) | Weather — 1Weather 1Weather (opens in new tab) been a constant in my theming articles for its widgets, which are easy to theme, but the app itself is themeable, too. 1Weather allows you to choose a backdrop for the app, as well as an accent color and either white or black icons. These would be even better if you could choose a dark theme akin to what 1Weather had before their Material Design update last year. Now, even if you choose dark icons and a dark background, you still have white cards to contend with in the app for any detailed information. Don't get me wrong, you can still get a weather app that fits your weather, your theme, and your life, but it may be a bit brighter than you wanted. Download 1Weather (Free, $1.99) (opens in new tab) | Android 13 Logo Mockup (Image credit: Nick Sutrich / Android Central) Google could introduce at least four new dynamic themes with Android 13. A separate leak also gives us our first look at Android 13's new notification permissions. The first Android 13 developer build is expected to be released sometime later this quarter. Back in June last year, Google rolled out a new wallpaper theming system called "Monet" to its best Android phones with Android 12 Beta 2. The feature changes the system colors and accents to match the wallpaper that you've set. According to a report from Android Police, Android 13 will bring new and more colorful styles for the dynamic theming system. The new color combinations, which are said to be under active development, are currently called TONAL SPOT, VIBRANT, EXPRESSIVE, and SPRITZ. While TONAL SPOT offers the dynamic theming system's default Material You color palette, VIBRANT is said to offer slight differences in supplementary accents. Image 1 of 8 EXPRESSIVE would offer a wider range of colors, including some that may not actually be in the background. SPRITZ is said to be a more muted, "nearly monochromatic" theme. While Android Police's sources claim the new styles will debut in Android 13, we wouldn't be surprised if they are a part of the final Android 12L release. Image 1 of 8 Besides new color combinations for Monet, Android 13 is also expected to bring new notification permissions. Apps will no longer be able to send you notifications without your permission. While more details regarding the change are expected to surface once the first Android 13 developer beta is released, a screenshot of the actual dialer has been shared by Android Police. Each time an app seeks the POST_NOTIFICATIONS runtime permission for the first time, you'll see the above dialog on your phone. The new leak comes just days after a mockup gave us our first look at Android 13's new media handoff feature. The upcoming feature will make it possible for users to tap their phone onto another device to easily transfer media playback. Google Pixel 6 The vanilla Pixel 6 is a value-focused flagship with an eye-catching design, fantastic cameras, and Google's first-ever custom mobile processor. A hacker is a person who uses computer programming to overcome a problem or challenge within a computer system. While the term hacker often carries a negative connotation, not all hacking involves criminal or malicious activity. What kinds of hackers are there? Some of the kinds of hackers include: Black hat hackers: Hackers are often most associated with black hat hackers, or cyber criminals who exploit weaknesses to illegally intrude into computer systems for money, revenge, or just for fun. White hat hackers: These hackers can use their skills to fix problems in a computer system or to help companies strengthen their IT systems by identifying potential weak spots in the security infrastructure. Gray hat hackers: While gray hat hackers have good intentions, they may not use lawful or ethical methods during the hacking process. The term hacker can have a negative connotation, as it is often associated with black hat hackers, or cyber criminals who illegally intrude into computer systems for money, revenge, or just for fun. While a black hat hacker exploits any potential weaknesses in the system to gain unethical or unlawful entry into the system, a white hat hacker can use similar skills with the intention of fixing a problem. White hat hackers also help companies strengthen their IT security systems by identifying potential weak spots in the security infrastructure. Another category of hackers includes gray hat hackers, who hack with positive intentions but not might use lawful or ethical means for the hacking process. What is an ethical hacker? Ethical hackers perform legitimate services for organizations and IT companies to assess the security risks of a network or system. A certified ethical hacker is a skilled individual who uses the same knowledge and tools as a malicious hacker, but who does so in a lawful and legitimate manner. Ethical hackers will often pursue Certified Ethical Hacker status as part of their professional development. Learn more about what's involved in CEH certification and begin your studies with Tech Republic's Certified Ethical Hacker study course. How does a hacker operate? Hackers are equipped with different types of skills and tools that are used to hack into the system. The most common tools used by hackers are downloadable scripts or files that can be disguised in emails or websites. As users click on these files, the attachments is launched on the computer or network, and the hacker gets access to the computer. There are several more sophisticated methods of hacking such as brute force attack, Trojan horse, DoS (denial-of-service) attack, and more. How can businesses protect themselves from a black hat hacker? As hackers continue to find new ways to intrude into computer systems, businesses have to remain vigilant to identify and stop hackers from gaining access or control of their IT network. Businesses should limit employee access to valuable company data, as human error is a common pathway used by hackers. Companies should also install surge protectors and power supplies for uninterruptible power to their IT infrastructure. If the budget allows, companies should have a dedicated IT security team responsible for managing the security of the system. Lastly, the business should install anti-hacking software on their computer network to minimize the chances of any hacker gaining entry into their system. Keep an eye on the top 40 cybersecurity startups. Top anti-hacking software There are different levels of anti-hacking software available on the market. There are some for personal users, small businesses, and large enterprises. Some of the most popular anti-hacking software for business include Windows Defender, Microsoft Enhanced Mitigation Experience Toolkit, Malwarebytes Anti-Malware, McAfee Security Plus, and Norton Antivirus program. No one wants to type on an ugly keyboard. While there are keyboards out there that go a bit overboard on themes, Google Keyboard likes to keep it simple. Always clean, always minimal. What you may not realize, however, is that it does have a few themes tucked inside its Settings menu. If you're running the newest version of Google Keyboard (5.0), accessing the Settings menu is the same as previous versions: long-press the comma (or whatever key is in that highlighted location below—it changes according to what app the input field is in), then tap "Google Keyboard settings." From there, all the visual settings are now nestled under "Preferences." Go ahead and tap that. The first entry in this menu is "Themes," and tapping that will open the selection box that now only has two options: Material Light and Material Dark. The Holo themes of previous versions are gone, which really makes sense as Google has been pushing Material for the past couple of years. Once you've made your selection, this box will disappear. There is one more customization method in this version of the Keyboard that wasn't available in previous versions, however: "Show key border." This puts a colored border between each key, giving them separation from each other. This is the perfect answer to the gripe many users have had about Google Keyboard's Material themes since the keyboard was released to the public. That's it—you're done. Back of this menu and enjoy your "new" keyboard. You'll type faster now, I promise. While it may seem trivial when it comes to overall functionality (the keyboard's performance and accuracy do not change with the theme), it's amazing how something small like a key border can help users become more accurate. It's all about jumping those mental barriers!
